

Journal of Environmental Information Science

EDITORIAL POLICY

The Journal of Environmental Information Science is published in English by the Center for Environmental Information Science to promote international research in environmental information science. The Journal publishes original research papers, general reviews, and technical reports that cover all aspects of environmental information science. Papers to be published in the Journal must contain original research results with scientific value for environmental information science. Manuscripts are judged on the basis of their contributions.

* * *

1. Contribution Requirement

The author listed first is restricted to individual members or supporting members in good standing with this Center.

• Supporting members are limited to two submissions a year per one unit.

2. Contents of Contribution

The Journal publishes the following types of papers:

(i) Original article:

This is an article that describes the original findings and summarizes a theoretical or empirical research on environmental information science. Its purpose, method, results, and conclusions are explicit, of academic value, and whose application value is high.

(ii) Short communication:

These are short reports that describe original findings and summarize theoretical or empirical research on environmental information science. Their purpose, method and results are explicit, of academic value, and whose application value is high.

(iii) Review article:

This entails a summary of literature on environmental information science. The premise of the discussion, logical expansion, and conclusion are explicit, of academic value, and whose application value is high. A review article should demonstrate a high level of originality.

(iv) Technical report:

This is a report on academic research and investigation, planning and design, and technology development that is original and offers the possibility of future development.

3. Contribution Conditions

Contribution is restricted to an unpublished article, regardless of language. However, the papers enumerated below, at the time of re-summarizing content and composition for contribution, are treated as unpublished.

In these cases, the copy of the paper relevant to the above is attached and contributed; further, the relevance is referred to in the main text or notes of the manuscript that is being contributed. A final decision will be made by the editorial committee as to whether or not the submitted copy deserves to be treated as unpublished.

- (1) Part of an academic dissertation
- (2) The article was presented in other societies, symposiums, research presentation meetings, and international conferences; further, it is not under review.
- (3) The article was published as a technical bulletin, research report of a university, and research institute or research organization.
- (4) The article is suitable as an occasional contribution: the author(s) has copyright in a country, local government, industry, or result report of an organization's sponsored research.

Moreover, the submission of a duplicate article to Environmental Information Science, Papers on Environmental Information Science, or the publication of other societies is forbidden.

4. Publication of papers

Accepted papers will be published online and made open to the public through the J-STAGE website.

6. Examination Method

The submitted manuscript is reviewed by the following method.

(1) Reviewing members’ selection

The Editorial Committee assigns one specialized editorial committee member to one contributed article for ensuring that each submission is correctly appraised.

Moreover, in principle, other than the editorial committee, those who have knowledge and experience in the research and business of environmental information science select two to three reviewing members who are experienced in the field of study related to the article being reviewed.

(2) Report of reviewing results

A reviewing member reviews a paper based on the contents shown in the “Journal of Environmental Information Science peer review guideline”; subsequently, the findings are provided in a predetermined style and submitted to the editorial committee.

Based on the report, the member specializing in articles attaches the suggestions for manuscript revision or rejection and reports to the editorial committee.

(3) Adoption or rejection of a manuscript

The editorial committee examines and determines adoption or rejection based on the report of the specializing members who reviewed the article.

7. The Result Announcement

Examination results will be announced by email. In case a revision is requested, the revised manuscript should be submitted by the designated deadline. It will then be re-examined by the editorial committee.

8. After Acceptance

In case of acceptance, please submit a final manuscript as a Word file (doc format), and send the publication fee to the designated bank account without delay.

9. Charges to Authors

The following fees will be charged to submitting authors. The secretariat will contact the person in charge of the paper after the submission deadline regarding the method of payment of the paper examination fee. Payment must be made without delay in accordance with the instructions. The paper examination fee will not be refunded if the manuscript is rejected because it does not follow submission guidelines.
